Locate relevant data by collecting, preserving, and harvesting data from mobile devices, hard drives, and backup tapes (e.g. deleted, hidden, lost or encrypted files) in a wide range of formats and media, and preserving data in a forensically sound fashion (e.g. locked, fireproof safe for evidentiary).

Recovery data in a forensically sound fashion from all types of devices including smartphones, laptops, tablets, legacy backup tapes, wind turbines, medical devices, vehicles, large mainframe technologies dating back to the 50’s and 60’s, through today’s distributed server farms and mobile computing technologies.

Work with counsel to resolve challenges related to evidence collection, computer forensics, or other discovery and litigation support processes in a sound and defensible manner. Reverse engineer and reconstruct hardware and software environments from backups, remnants, and fragments of historical software involved in a forensic investigation. Help counsel understand the technical and legal perspective stated by opposing parties’ expert reports.

Assist the court in understanding the technology relevant to a case and make recommendations regarding forensic issues specific to the dispute, especially when the voluminous materials need to be reviewed or inspections outside of court facilities are necessary.
Case Studies

Aerospace & Defense Company

Problem: Theft of trade secrets by international company.

Solution: Retained to testify as a forensic expert in a federal dispute concerning a theft by an international aerospace and defense company. Our testimony was essential in delivering a very favorable settlement in favor of our client.

Gambling/Entertainment Company

Problem: Policy dispute.

Solution: Hired as an expert witness in a dispute with an insurance company as to whether it had to honor a policy our client had purchased to protect against insider threats and theft. L&F’s forensic expert identified the employee who was the critical bad actor in a $100,000,000+ fraud. L&F testimony was instrumental in forcing the insurance company to offer a favorable settlement to our client.

Global Insurance Company

Problem: Data recovery.

Solution: Retained by software firm’s general counsel to recover data from backup tapes from the 80’s and 90’s. L&F recovered the data in a forensically sound fashion and testified about the process and results in several legal disputes involving the data stored on the tapes.
